VOLUME 39, NUMBER 1 SUMMER 2019-20
PRINT POST APPROVED 100003035

President's Report, Summer 2019

Welcome to 2020. I hope you have had a great Christmas and New Year.

Congratulations to all the award winners who participated in the End of Year competition. We finished the year with a record number of entries which included a new category for our Alternative process photographers, we had 627 images in all.

Our print and PDI competition commenced in February with new rules and I'm sure that you would agree that these rules place less stress on our judges and allow us to get home at a reasonable hour.

We have a number of new volunteers for some of the Special Interest Groups. Paul Furness has taken on Lighting; Santina Velo and Aileen Santos, Analogue; Ken Bretherton the Archives and Gail Morgan, the Digital Editing Group. We wish them well as they take the lead and bring their own personal style to these groups. The Board has also approved the commencement for a new SIG – the Conceptual Photography Group. Keep your eye out on the syllabus which will guide you through the monthly sessions for this group. More information to follow. This is a member's club and we continue to seek volunteers from our membership to lead, coordinate and assist in our wide array of activities.

The Board continues to consider the safety of our members and our premises. We are in the process of moving the archive storage downstairs with cupboard space to store our archived print collection. The compactus in the annex has been removed and the books are being reorganised so that members have easy access to them. The studio, the downstairs kitchen and the lighting cupboard will be reorganised so that we use the space effectively for the entire club. The storage area above the darkroom has been made safe with wire mesh. A big thanks to our maintenance team - Colin Booth, Peter Tredrea and Kees Zonneveld for their tireless efforts maintaining our building.

We will continue to run our Introduction to Photography courses this year, a big thank you to Gary and Gail and all the other members who make this a very successful course for MCC. We will also be running two 'Introduction to Lightroom Basic' courses this year and also four 'Darkroom Basics' courses. 'Thank you' to Shane Booth for continuing to lead this popular course for the club.

We will have an expanded exhibitions program this year some of which will be themed to attract a wide variety of photographers. Paul Dodd has kindly volunteered to lead a marketing and revenue raising team to concentrate on marketing efforts for the club. If you feel that you are able to contribute with your marketing talents do get in touch with myself or with Paul.

The Board is updating the policies and procedures for the club, please acquaint yourself with all the policies. Do keep checking on all our activities through our website, email and social media platforms.

I hope that you will enjoy your photography this coming year.

Mark Devaraj
President MCC

Photo Walk in Historic South Melbourne

Chinese Temple South Melbourne Walk

The attached photos were taken with a 10.5mm Nikkor Fisheye lens on a D7200 (APS-C sensor) from an elevated position using a 3.5 metre pole. The purpose of the pole is to offer a perspective different to that at ground level. Originally the pole had three extensions but during a vivid nightmare, I realized that the 240 volt power lines and 600 volt tram conductors could interfere with my cameras electronics (among other things).

The Joss House in Raglan Street had special meaning for me. 55 years ago, my uncle operated a butcher shop in the Emerald Hotel building (around the corner), and on a few occasions I worked Saturday mornings with him and took my first serious photos of an architectural subject (the Temple).

This has been my main Photo interest ever since. The pole was designed to look over the construction barriers on several of Melbourne's major building sites (County Court and QV developments to name a few).

Reflections on photographic reality

KEN BREThERTON

Some club members recently mooted the possibility of forming a discussion group on conceptual photography. I am not really sure what is the scope of conceptual photography, but I wondered if this is partly motivated as a response to the belief, still current among some members of the general community, that a photo just captures reality and therefore cannot really be art.

This led me to muse on the concept of “reality” as perceived by the human eye compared to the concept of “reality” as captured by the camera and how both relate to the “art” of photography.

Superficially the eye and the camera are structurally similar; both have lenses that can zoom to focus at various distances, the pupils of our eyes can contract and dilate to provide variable f-stops and both the camera and our eyes capture the image on a light-sensitive surface. But the eye and the camera differ in their fundamental physics. For example, our eyes see the world as if through a 50mm lens whereas the camera can distort reality as we see it depending on the focal length of the lens we choose. By using a camera with a wide-angle camera lens the photographer can distort near objects, shrink the background and impart a sense of increased depth to the image. Conversely, by using a long lens the photographer can frame a sliver of visual reality while compressing the foreground and background. In this way photographers can create an interpretation of reality that expresses their emotional reaction rather than just recording a one-to-one collection of corresponding pixels.

Not only can the differing physics between the camera and our eye serve as a spring board to our creativity, but our visual processing often distorts our perceptions so as to make them conform to our expectations. This also can be harnessed to aid our creative interpretation of reality. Understanding visual illusions can give us an insight into how we distort visual perception, as would be recorded by a camera, to conform to our expectations.

One powerful illustration of this is the grey square illusion (Fig. 1). Look at squares A and B. Square B obviously looks much lighter than square A. But do they actually differ in reality? Placing Colour Sampler points in each square, reveals that the measured colours of A and B are actually identical, as shown in the Info palette (Fig. 2). Reducing the opacity of the surrounding squares also reveals the two squares to be identical in tone (Fig. 3). This illusion clearly demonstrates that an image is more than just the sum of its isolated individual parts but is also influenced by how the surrounding parts interact with each other. Utilizing phenomena such as these can be used creatively by photographers – for example, in lightening an object by darkening its surrounds.

So, it is my belief that an understanding of the physical and psychological concepts involved in image capture and processing can be used to greatly enhance the photography as an art form.

The Queenie Gatt Trophy

The Queenie Gatt Trophy is a perpetual trophy that is awarded by Charles Gatt in memory of his late mother, Queenie Gatt. It is awarded to honour MCC members for their non-photographic work in support of the Club. The award winner receives the trophy, which is to be returned in time for the next trophy holder to receive it, and a medal which is for the recipient to keep.

Paul Palcek has been awarded the Trophy in 2019 for his unstinting work at, and for, the club. Paul is an IT specialist with a passion for the club and for its activities. For many years he has projected, organised material and just quietly gone about making the club work at its best.

It is Paul who puts titles on the projected images; it is Paul who sets up the slide show on the TV screen for exhibitions. When we want to know how things should work, we ask Pau. He does the things which are sometimes taken for granted but which make club presentations work in a professional manner. We are proud of our club and it is people like Paul who keep things running well and without fuss.

MCC ENJOYS SUCCESS IN AUSTRIA

Earlier in 2019, ten club members submitted prints and digital images in the club's entry to the Trierenburg Super Circuit, which is claimed to be the world's largest photo art contest. That the entries were of a very high standard is evidenced by the trophy awarded the club and being listed as one of the overall top clubs.

In addition, Marg Huxtable was awarded a gold medal for one of her seascape entries.

The result is a credit to all who supported the club by their participation.

The Bockey

END OF YEAR COMPETITION

The Bocky is an annual award presented to the photographer whose image is judged to be the 'most fun' by Ian Bock after whom the award is named.

I chose this photo because it was so well done, it looks simple one just sets the camera on continuous drive and then combines the images in the computer.

But it isn't so easy. I tried it out with the grandson over Christmas.

Congratulations to John Parkinson.

Ian Bock.
